

THE TOBACCO ISSUE

	Editor's Introduction: On Tobacco and Oral History 8
PART I	SURGERY ON THE EAGLE: THE MASTER SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT 13 Surgery on the Eagle, by Peter K. Andreone 14 What is the Master Settlement Agreement and why will it rearrange Southern Maryland's cultural and physical landscape? A View from the Top, by Peter K. Andreone 19 An interview with Assistant State Attorney General Camen Shepard explores why Maryland, dependent upon tobacco production since 1634, filed suit against the tobacco companies. A Foot in Both Worlds, by Peter K. Andreone and Jason Proetorius 24 Delegate John Slade and Senator Thomas Middleton helped craft legislation that ends a family tradition.
PART II	CULTURAL LEGACY 31 The Lure of Sotweed, by Henry Miller 32 An archaeologist charts the rise and fall of tobacco's prominence. In My Time When I Was Coming Along, told by Elsie Bean 39 A native Southern Marylander explains the seasonal cycle that has changed little in nearly four hundred years. The Southern Maryland Tobacco Barn, by Julia A. King 44 How do tobacco barns express centuries of continuity and change? Eastern Europe's Emigres, told by Joseph Gresko, Sue Roskos, and John Sivak 50 Recollections of Slovak-Americans whose fortunes were tied to tobacco. Stop and Realize What's Coming, told by John Frank Mattingly, Jr. 55 At 58, Mattingly believes he's "about the youngest farmer around here" and the last of a dying breed. I'm Getting Ready to Get Myself in Trouble, told by Howard Chase 61 The only thing you can do with tobacco, says this sharecropper's son, is to "blow it up in the air and work yourself to death in it."

	Tobacco Gets in Your Blood, told by Joseph Vallandingham 66 A farmer who raises 120,000 pounds annually defends a family tradition.
PART III	FACING THE FUTURE 74
	Changing Hands: A Bleak Outlook for Farm Labor, by Dyani Payne-Tijero 76 “Latinos are the newest among the long line of imported laborers whose hands historically have worked this land.”
	Pride in Tobacco, told by Donna Sasscer 80 On festivals and Queen Nicotina.
	The Future—that’s a Big Question in My Mind, told by George B. Reeves 81 One of the region’s most successful farmers paints a sobering portrait of agriculture’s economic future.
	The Economy Has Left Us Behind Like a Jet Plane, by Rebecca Taylor 86 Warehouse owner Gilbert Bowling watches another Southern Maryland tradition come to an end.
CODA	Thomas Earl Brady, Retired farmer, Charles County 94 James Raley, Farmer, St. Mary’s County 94 James Walter Neal, Retired farmer and laboratory technician, St. Mary’s County 94