A General Bibliography of The Gambia.

Supplement VI. 1996-1999 .

Gambian Studies No. 43.

After completing Supplement V, which was issued in March 1998, I turned my attention to other topics, thinking that people would be able to obtain information from the Internet, various databases, and such bibliographies as were still being published. Many libraries seemed to be less interested in obtaining printed bibliographies.

But notes and cards accumulated in my office, and eventually in 2001 I decided to bring together a further volume covering 1996-1999, as well as including earlier items which had come my way. Professor Peter Weil, for example, had passed on to me a great deal of the material he had acquired in the course of his early research in The Gambia, In addition a study of Alex Haley's work (Gambian Studies No. 39) added to my material on 'Roots'. So about 12% of the entries are items from before 1996.

But other published sources had dried up. The Gambia National Library had ceased to publish an annual list of its Gambian acquisitions. The old Joint Acquisitions List, giving African material acquired by a number of American Universities was no longer published.

So where do the entries in Supplement VI come from ? Luckily, for several of the crucial years, I was supplied with copies of the Daily Observer, and other newspapers by a friend. These were years when the paper was at its best, free to express its views. So material from Gambian newspapers accounts for 42% of the entries.

It was discovered also that much valuable material appears in local magazines such as (Tourism) Concern, and Touraco: Journal of the West African Bird Study Association, etc. These comprise 7% of the total.

Various databases provide most of the entries found in major scientific journals. MEDLINE, provides medical references (13%), CURRENT CONTENTS which covers the periodicals received by the University of California system, another 12%

But basic library research is still necessary. There are a number of periodicals, West Africa, New African, etc. which have to be regularly consulted, (4%) as their contents are not listed in the major journal databases. Newspapers- The Times (London), The New York Times, the Christian Science Monitor, etc. (2%) have printed indices. Library Catalogs (the Library of Congress, the library system of the University of California, of Stanford, of San Francisco State University provide another 2%. General browsing - checking reference books, etc. turn up another 2%. Dissertation Abstracts International and the ERIC database provide 1%.

A variety of works are periodically checked- Humantiies Index, Index to Black Periodicals, International African Bibliography, International Development Abstracts, International Political Science Abstracts, Nutrition Abstracts and Reviews, Readers' Guide, PAIS International, etc.

In all about 12% of the entries are derived from library research.

The remaining items come from a variety of sources, each generally amounting to 1% or less.

- a Provided by the author.
- b Provided by a dealer in African material.
- c Seen on bookstores, or on booksellers' lists.
- d Brochures etc. provided for tourists.
- e Publications, newsletters etc. or organisations interested in The Gambia. ("Links" etc.).
- f Material brought back by friends who visited The Gambia.
- g From footnotes or references in books and articles.

A small residue remains where the original source was not clear or not recorded. Items which have been included without being actually seen amount to 5% of the total.

I feel, however, that the volume still lacks adequate data on publications from various Government Departments. There is also a category in which a visiting expert has written a report and presented a copy to the appropriate department, but the material is "unpublished", though it may be consulted and used by other writers.

Thanks are due to the local Public Library in Brisbane, to the Public Library System in San Francisco, to the Library of San Francisco State University, to the University of California Medical Center Library in San Francisco, the University of California Library system at Berkeley.

Special thanks are due to the staff at the Library of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London; and the Partnership House Mission Studies Library, / for the excellent research they did in answer to certain of my queries.

Individuals who have been to The Gambia, and provided me with material - newspapers, guide-books, local publications, etc. include Prof. Peter Weil, (University of Delaware), Bill Roberts (St.Mary's College, Maryland) ; Dr. Paulla Ebron ; Dr. Judith Carney and Dr. Richard Shroeder ; Elizabeth Stewart, and Susan Carpendale ; Dr. Alice Bellagamba (Italy), Heidi Skramstad, (Chr.Michelsen Institute, Norway), et al.

The staff of Tourism Concern (in London), and the Marlborough Brandt Group, which has a link with Gunjur were also extremely helpful. Other "Links" the Yate-Genieri Link, and the Nova Scotia Gambia Association continued to supply information.

Material on the Internet

During the 1990s a major source for internet entries was <http://grove.ufl.edu/alyons/>

The editor provided a list of 500 links generated by Web Ferret, as well as shorter links to Gambia Related Resources. But this source ceased to exist in early 1993.

Some of the major material from it was taken over by M. Camara, e.g. the bibliographical resources. So see <http://home3.inet.tele.dk/mcamara/index.html>. & http://www.africanculture.dk/gambia/biblio/bib_menu.htm etc.

A second major source used was Infoseek, which listed nearly 500 items.
