I
SESSIONAL PAPERS

During a visit to The Gambia in December 1986/January 1987, a special effort was made to track down Sessional Papers from 1983 onwards.

Only a few items were available in the Sales Section of the Government Printing Office. The National Archives had no list for this period. The National Library seemed to have acquired very little. This spurred the Librarian, Mrs Sally Njie, into action, making use of her extensive network of friends in various government offices to try to obtain information, but it was largely in vain, and she began to feel the same sense of frustration that I had developed.

Many years ago I had met a little old lady ensconced in the back of the Government Printing Office, who meticulously maintained a list of the Sessional Papers, as they were printed, in an exercise book.* When she left (Retired? died?), it apparently became no one's specific duty to continue this task. After a long interval a senior member of the staff set up a new ledger in which such records were to be kept, beginning with 1984. But he went abroad for study, and during 1985 no entries were made, the first entry beginning with No. 2 of 1986. My last visit was to the office of the Clerk of the House of Representatives, from which publications were presumably sent to the Government Printer, but the Clerk of the House had been appointed only a short time before, and could not know what had happened in previous years.

Usually the Budget Speech is printed as a Sessional Paper, but most of the copies I have seen have been circulated without any Sessional Paper number. Possible explanations might be that a temporary paper shortage limited what the Government Printing Office could do, and so mimeographed material or photocopied material might be prepared instead, or that such copies were first circulated, and after delivery of the speech a formal printed version might be made.

Sessional Papers would now seem to be limited to reports from the Accountant-General, and the Auditor; the Annual Speech from the President at the Opening of Parliament, and the Budget Speech from the Minister of Finance and Trade.

* Perhaps the book has disappeared by now.
